Hunton & Williams LLP Launches Immigration and Nationality Law Blog

Hunton & Williams announces today the launch of the Immigration and Nationality Law Blog, www.huntonimmigrationlawblog.com, which focuses on up-to-date information on US immigration law relevant to employers and employees. The blog features current information and legal commentary on a broad range of related topics in the news; on new far-reaching legislation; and on recent court and regulatory decisions.

“The Immigration and Nationality Law Blog is updated frequently with critical information for US employers, including information about temporary and permanent US visas, employment verification issues and workplace enforcement issues,” said Ian Band, who heads the firm’s immigration and nationality practice. “While there are other online resources, our goal is to leverage the experience of our excellent team of lawyers and immigration professionals to provide a more comprehensive range of commentary on the issues that matter most to your business.”

The Hunton & Williams LLP Immigration practice, part of the firm’s Labor and Employment Team, is concentrated in two major areas. First our work involves advising American and foreign businesses about obtaining the most appropriate temporary and permanent work visas for executives, professionals and other skilled foreign workers. The second major area of our immigration practice is compliance oriented. Since the enactment of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, US employers are obligated to verify the identity and employment authorization of their workforce, and to generate and retain documentation on the verification process. The firm’s immigration practice provides extensive training and advice for human resource professionals and others on recommended verification procedures.
